Our Morphing Media and Public Policy: Towards a New Frontier

November 11, 2009
11:30 A.M. – 1:00 P.M.

Location: IUPUI Campus Center, Room 405
420 University Blvd.
Indianapolis, IN 46202

The practice of journalism and the nature of the media is undergoing dramatic change. That change has significant consequences for our common political life and for the process through which we make public policy. What do we know about the changes taking place? What are the likely consequences, for good or ill, of this morphing of our media? How do these changes affect the ability of public administrators and policy-makers to do their jobs?

Professor Sheila Suess Kennedy will moderate a conversation on these topics by a distinguished panel consisting of Bruce Hetrick, CEO of Hetrick Communications; James W. Brown, retiring Dean of IUPUI's Journalism School, and Matthew Tully, political columnist for the Indianapolis Star.

Join the discussion and learn where these changes are leading, and why the health and credibility of the Fourth Estate is vitally important to the field of public administration and to our national self-interest.

The Indiana Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration (ASPA) promotes the art, science, teaching, and practice of public and non-profit administration.

Note: This event will be webcast. If you would like to attend remotely, look for the webcast link in the News & Events section of the SPEA website, <http://www.spea.iupui.edu>, on the day of the event.

Attendance is free. Lunch will be provided. RSVP is requested.
